Parsons the New School for Design is one of the best places a designer can be. The level of intellectual work is pretty high. So are the levels of expectations from the students. The relationships are pretty supporting and there is great environment of collaboration and sharing. I helped many friends and professors with their work and they helped me incredibly.

I worked on my thesis project in Parsons. But also had the chance to join another course with credits. Wish I had the chance to take more classes. The credit system and other obligations where not clear at all. So we had some stressful days.

However, my days in New York were life changing and career boosting. - I believe that personal performance and commitment is highly important in this situation.

This was an amazing chance.

Thank you.
